Chiswick, a pleasant and popular suburb of the metropolis, is situated on the banks of the Thames three or four miles from London. It abounds in memories of dead and gone celebrities, prominent among which are Hogarth the artist, Charles Holland the actor, Barbara Villiers Duchess of Cleveland, and Sharp the engraver. There is a fine parish church which dates from 1609, but was rebuilt and enlarged in 1881. The famous Thorneycroft works are situated on the river's banks at Chiswick.
